

Highly trained employees – greater productivity. Profit from our customised training offers.

The productivity and competitiveness of your KROENERT production systems depends on many factors – how well qualified your machine operators are also plays a central role.

Well-trained employees with comprehensive expertise can exploit the full potential of the line and thus increase productivity and competitiveness. Your employees' knowledge and skills represent important company capital and are decisive for the overall success of your company.

Get up to date with the latest technology.

Our fully equipped modern training center awaits your visit. Our qualified and certified trainers look forward to sharing their knowledge with you. Each training is prepared customer-specifically and is adapted to the respective requirements and machines.

In the training courses designed for application engineers, shift supervisors, production and manufacturing managers and process engineers, KROENERT experts impart in-depth specialist knowledge. Each training is developed and presented in-house by engineers and technicians from different departments. The focus is on providing an optimal mix of theoretical and practical elements.

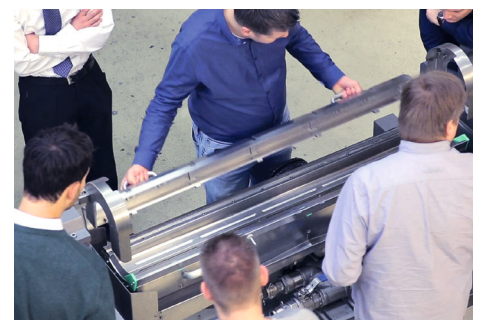

Personal exchange of experience and practical knowledge.

In addition to theoretical basics and practical applications in the KROENERT Technology Center, participants will receive valuable tips and tricks that will make their daily work with the systems more efficient.

The participants not only have the opportunity to get to know all areas such as technology, components and maintenance, but also benefit from an open and lively exchange with each other. This is how we learn with and from each other.

Your benefits:

- Deepen and reinforce your employees' line and technical knowledge
- Increase the qualification and motivation of your employees
- Up-to-date information on technology and spare parts
- Maximum utilisation of your line capacities
- Optimisation of your products and production processes
- More reliable operation and shorter downtimes
- Fewer defects and faster fault analysis

Training

Training in our Technology Center.

Our training courses at our head office in Hamburg are based on didactically designed training courses in modern classrooms. Our specialists convey basic knowledge about our systems and explain the interrelationships in the process engineering tasks during production.

In addition, training takes place directly on the equipment available in the Technology Center. The training sessions reinforce the knowledge from the training part and give you the confidence you need for using it on your own system.

In all phases of these trainings, high priority is given to the exchange of experience among participants and with the experts. An after-work evening rounds off the programme. We offer these trainings based on specific topics.

Find out about the current programme at www.kroenert.de.

On-site trainings.

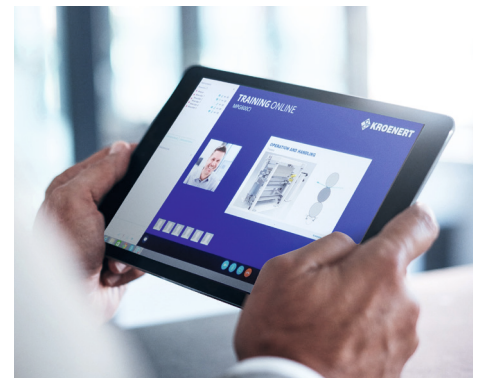

Would you like to receive individual training at your plant? Our trainers are happy to come to you and bring the training material with them. The training is tailored to your tasks and preferences. It doesn't matter whether the lessons should be conducted in your training rooms or on the machines themselves.

Online trainings.

Meet your KROENERT trainer online for interactive, customer-specific training on topics such as process technology, operation and handling, maintenance or drying and humidification technology. This means you don't have to travel and you can participate from wherever you want.

Engineering and service experts will explain the structure and mode of operation of the individual machine components and the overall system. In addition to theoretical basics and practical applications you will receive valuable tips and tricks that will make your daily work with the systems more efficient.

The online training can be arranged flexibly and at short notice with a short lead time

Your benefits:

- Individually adapted to your requirements
- No travel costs and no additional time expenditure
- Participation from your workplace or home-office (individually or in a team)
- Training documents as PDF file for downloading
- Easy handling – just log in and the presentations are at your disposal
